Woman-centred

This guide takes a woman-centred approach to pregnancy options. It’s based on the belief that women are the experts in their own lives so they are the ones who should make the decisions about their pregnancy. Women are in the best position – morally, legally and practically – to make a decision based on their strengths, limitations and resources.

What is influencing your decision?

Different women will have different considerations in their lives. The exercise above may help you to consider what’s influencing your decision.
Making a good decision

Children by Choice says a woman-centred approach:

“focuses on helping you, the woman, by looking first at you and your needs, thoughts, feelings and beliefs in relation to the options available to you with an unplanned pregnancy. The reason that you need to focus on yourself first of all is that you are the most important person in the process of decision-making for an unplanned pregnancy. This is not to say that others are not important but that it is vital that you don’t forget yourself and your own needs in making this decision.”

Start with how you feel about this pregnancy.

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

Then what you think about each option. It may take some time to sort out your feelings and thoughts, realities and fantasies, heart and head.

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

At first you may feel confused and overwhelmed. But with support and trust in your ability to make a good decision, you will make the right decision for you. The decision may not be 100% clear, but most women find one option begins to feel more right than the others. You are the only person who can judge when you have reached the right decision for you.
Some valuable tips for making a decision

1. Take your time
   - Give yourself time – quality time – cut down on commitments
   - Who else do you want to talk to?
   - Continue with practical arrangements
   - Weigh up options carefully

2. Assess your situation
   - Get a clear picture of your present situation
   - What do you want for the future?
   - Get information about the options available

3. What information do you need?
   - Write a list of all the questions you want answered

4. Trust yourself to make the right decision
   - Do not punish yourself – be your own best friend and advocate

5. Look after your feelings
   - Listen to your heart (fantasy) and head (practicality). Let them have a kind conversation with each other

6. Look after yourself
   - Your physical and emotional wellbeing is a priority

7. Do I want to talk about this with anyone?
   - What support will I need from them? Am I likely to get it?
   - How might they respond?

8. Who is around to give me support?
   - Who will give me support with my decision?
   - Who is around to provide practical support?
Women Know

We women know when it is or is not the right time to bring a child into the world.

We use our heads and our hearts to see clearly the pros and cons of our three choices: parenting, placing for adoption, or having an abortion.

We know better than anyone else what we can and cannot handle emotionally, physically, financially, and mentally.

We know our own limits and strengths.

We know when the choice of abortion can prevent the harsh consequences of bringing a child into the world when we are not ready or able to do our child justice.

We act out of compassion when we wait to have a child until the time when we can give it the kind of life every child deserves.

We act out of love when we consider what we would be taking away from the child or children we already have if we brought another child into our family now.

We take care of our mental health by making decisions that limit the strain we place upon ourselves and those we love.

We take care of our physical health by considering our medical history and the risks that come with pregnancy, labour and delivery.

We think clearly when we call our abortion decision one of ‘self-care’ rather than calling ourselves selfish. We must care for ourselves before we can take care of another human being.

We see clearly beyond other’s words, ‘I’ll help you out if you have the baby…’ We know that the responsibility for raising a child will fall squarely on our own shoulders.

We have foresight enough to know that ‘having a baby’ doesn’t stop with infancy. It means raising a child who will need our financial support, time and attention for as long as it takes the child to become an independent adult.

Women throughout all time and throughout the world have made the decision to have an abortion, whether or not abortion was safe and legal. Women have risked their own lives to avoid bearing a child they could not adequately care for.

Childbirth, miscarriage, and abortion are all parts of women’s lives. Women of childbearing age from every generation, occupation, income level, race and religion have had abortions.

Whatever their choice, women know the truth about their lives

References

2. Ibid.

Disclaimer The Royal Women’s Hospital does not accept any liability to any person for the information or advice (or use of such information or advice) which is provided in this fact sheet or incorporated into it by reference. We provide this information on the understanding that all persons accessing it take responsibility for assessing its relevance and accuracy. Women are encouraged to discuss their health needs with a health practitioner. If you have concerns about your health, you should seek advice from your health care provider or if you require urgent care you should go to the nearest hospital Emergency Department. © The Royal Women’s Hospital, February 2010